Winkhaus expands its digital services with a new website

Find information quickly and easily: The new Winkhaus website has recently been launched. It clearly and concisely presents the variety and advantages of Winkhaus products and solutions from the areas of window technology, door locking systems and access control. The new modern look and well-prepared content appeal to end users as well as existing or prospective business partners.

A clear, concise structure of the pages and intuitive user guidance make it easier to handle and speed up the search for content. There will be different versions of the website in more than twenty languages so that people around the world can find out about Winkhaus first-hand.

Portal with technical details

The newly created Winkhaus Portal is also available for professionals with detailed technical information for customers who would like to delve deeper into the Winkhaus product world. For example, the product catalogue and various digital services, which are specially tailored to the different target groups, can be found here. These include, for example, Winkhaus Locking Services and a configurator for security door locking systems or a tool for inventory planning of Winkhaus items. The digital service content is available to customers around the clock. This means they can access it whenever it suits their day-to-day work best.
